Introductory Course to help become a fishmonger

Get into Fishmongering!

At Billingsgate Market

FREE!

The Seafood School, together with the London Fish & Poultry Retail Association are now offering a free introductory course to anyone who wants to get into the trade and become a fishmonger. Fish mongering can be exciting and rewarding; however, access into the business lacks a formal training route. This course is aimed at people who are not currently in the trade and is designed as a taster into the Seafood Industry. The day is also for people who are looking at setting up their own seafood business or for small businesses that would like to develop their staff.

2005 - Next courses: 1st September, 13th October, 8 December.

The day starts with a market tour at 0630, followed by hands on knife skills for the rest of the morning. After an informal lunch, eating some of the morning's fish, there is time to discuss individual's projects in a workshop environment.

This is what one of our recent participants thought of the day:

"It was great to learn some new ways to prepare fish. Charlie was both informative and entertaining. I am very interested in further courses. I would appreciate receiving information on any courses available. Since the course, I have added a good filleting knife to my collection and have practiced the techniques Charlie showed us. I am particularly keen to learn more about knife techniques."

Places on the course will be strictly limited; if yourself or one your friends or family would be interested in finding out more, please contact:
